Diversity and Inclusion

Minnesota State has made tremendous progress in the diversification of its workforce and student body:

- Women comprise fully one-half of those in senior leadership positions.
- One-third of the system's 30 presidents are people of color or American Indian, as are one-quarter of recently hired professional, managers, and administrators.
- One quarter of the students served across the state are students of color or American Indian students - a 61% increase over the past decade

Strategic Human Resources Initiatives

Minnesota State is midway through a major change initiative in human resources administration. Groundwork has been laid for a new common business practice model for Minnesota State systemwide HR transactional delivery, which involved moving transactional work to four regional service centers.

The new model allows the campus HR teams to focus on the needs of their institution and serve as strategic partners engaged in transformational rather than transactional work, such as:

- Campus Culture and Employee Engagement
- Change Management
- Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion
- Employee and Labor Relations
- Employee and Leadership Development
- Intentional Recruitment and Retention
- New Employee Onboarding
- Organizational Development
- Performance Management
- Strategic Workforce Planning and Design
- Succession Planning

The four regional HR service centers will:

- Deliver cost-effective, high-quality HR transactional services to their client colleges and universities
- Provide subject matter expertise on HR transactional activities to support campus HR teams
- Focus on continuous improvement and establish common business practices to mitigate risk and ensure accuracy
- Provide systemwide business continuity for HR transactional services in the event of emergency or unforeseen situations at any regional HR service center
